Test Checkpoints and Marking Criteria

Test 1 - Chemical Texture Service, Hair Cut and Style with Wishes Checkpoints

This test will have multiple checkpoints.

It is important to note that competitors may choose several different techniques and wrapping patterns that are all acceptable. Blend line rods may be treated differently for easier blend results and competitors must not be demerited for these artistic choices as long as they respect the health and safety of the client. The remainder of the chemically altered area should fall to manufacture instruction and industry standards.

Observation (Demerit Process) Represented in Measurement Rubric

- Work Organization and Management (Observational during saging)

Judgement Element	0	1	2	3
Overall Impression of Haircut	Haircut is below industry standards. Poorly executed and would not be acceptable to the client.	The haircut meets industry standards. It has a few areas where you can see there could be more weight taken out or has some slight visible technical errors but is acceptable to the customer. The client would pay but not necessarily go back there.	The haircut performance meets industry standards and surpasses that standard to some extent. There are no obvious problems with the haircut. The perimeter could be more precise. The client would pay and would go back there again to have their hair done.	The haircut is excellent or an outstanding performance relative to the industry's expectations. Haircut exceeds every aspect of the industry standard. The client would be extremely happy. The client would go nowhere else to have their hair cut.

Wish Integration Quality	There is no wish integration evident	Some elements of the wish integration inconsistent	The wish integration is industry standard	The wish integration is outstanding
