THE FACTS

- Over the next five years, there will be a deficit of 10 000 skilled trade workers in Canada (Cameron, 2021).
- Apprentices with the Skills for Success they need for their trade are eight times more likely to pass their technical exams.
- Ensuring workers possess the right skills is crucial to the success of our economy (Lavrijsen & Nicaise, 2017).
- Employers report that graduates entering their workplace have only 30% of the Skills for Success needed for the job.
- It is estimated that 25% of the Canadian manufacturing workforce will retire by 2030.
- Building a better workforce means tapping into more diverse labour pools, such as newcomers to Canada, Indigenous youth, and cross-sectoral labour mobility.
